The screenshot shows a webpage with a light blue header and a white main content area. The header features the FamilySearch logo and navigation links. The main content area is divided into three columns. The left column contains a search form with fields for name, life event, and country, and a 'Search' button. The middle column contains the main announcement text, including sections for 'Upgraded website', 'What is happening to this old website?', 'Where can you learn more about the new website?', and 'Need help?'. The right column contains a sidebar with a 'Sign in Register' link and a 'Videos and more' section. At the bottom, there are two buttons: 'Go to FamilySearch.org' and 'Continue to old website'.

Upgraded website
We're pleased to announce that our upgraded website—FamilySearch.org—is now available. As always, the website is free to the public. It provides exciting new features and over two billion historical records...with more added every week.

What is happening to this old website?
Most of the records and indexes on this site have already been added to our new site. Many features on this website have also been moved. The remaining ones will be moved over in the coming weeks.

Where can you learn more about the new website?
A helpful guide listing upgrades and new features can be found at FamilySearch.org Website Changes—22 February 2012. The guide also includes how-to videos to make your switch to the new website easy and enjoyable.
